

Sweden's TreeToTextile joins ITMF as corporate member

December 13, 2023 - Sweden

Swedish firm TreeToTextile has joined the International Textile Manufacturers Federation (ITMF) as the corporate member.

The purpose of TreeToTextile is to develop and industrialise a new innovative man-made cellulosic fibre technology that will provide textile fibres with good sustainability performance at an attractive cost-level. TreeToTextile's goal is to deploy new technology for textiles made from cellulose and make it accessible for textile suppliers and brands around the world.

"Welcoming TreeToTextile as a new corporate member of ITMF is an important sign that ITMF is an attractive international platform for both well-established companies as well as start-ups. To strengthen TreeToTextile's international network with players from the entire global textile value chain is certainly a crucial point. In return, well-established companies in the value chain see the value as well as the transformative power of start-ups. More cooperation among all players in the value chain is necessary to accelerate the needed transformation of the industry towards a more sustainable future," Christian Schindler, director general of ITMF, said in a press release.

Andreas Nilsson, head of commercial of TreeToTextile, said, "Collaboration is one of the cornerstones in how TreeToTextile was founded. Every day we collaborate with our owners, research partners and team members to achieve our vision: 'Better fibres to all'. We look forward to joining the unique international platform of ITMF and continue to build our network across the entire value chain. It offers a great opportunity to understand the development and the opportunities the textile industry is facing. We were happy to be awarded the ITMF Start-up Award 2023 earlier this fall and are looking forward to joining future events and conferences that will provide us with useful information and analysis about the industry, to support our journey ahead."
